PLEASANT GROVE HISTORIC PRESERVATION COMMISSION

Excellence in Historic Preservation Award Announced for June, 2010

The Historic Preservation Commission's "2010 Excellence in Historic Preservation," award has been awarded to Kevin and Michele Draper and family. The Commission has chosen to recognize the Draper Family for this on-going efforts in the community to preserve one of Pleasant Grove's unique historic properties. Originally known as the Samuel Green home, it is located at 264 East 200 South. The home was built for English emigrants Samuel and Pamela Wishaw Green in 1870 out of native soft rock. The Draper family purchased the home in 1981 and have lived there since that time. The home has been in the family since it was originally built, as Michele is a third generation great-grand-daughter to Samuel Green.

An important historical feature of this home, as well as more than 100 homes located in Pleasant Grove, is the use of soft rock or "Tufa-stone." This native stone was quarried locally from the foothills of Pleasant Grove in its "soft" or "wet" stage. When the cut blocks dried out, they hardened into a very useful building material for early settlers. The stone was formed over hundreds of years when mineral laden water passed through organic debris such as sticks and leaves. The organic matter deteriorated, leaving small voids and pockets. When hardened, the stone retains these voids and pockets, encapsulating air, and thus forming a very good insulating material. Many soft-rock home owners in Pleasant Grove can attest to this fact, given that their home tend to be cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter.

The Draper family has spent many countless hours in preservation and maintenance structure. When they undertook to repair the roof, they found the rough sawn original timbers which were rip-cut by hand. Owner Kevin Draper estimates that the exterior walls are seventeen inches thick.

The 2010 Excellence in Historic Preservation award is presented with our highest commendation for the diligence in preserving the historic character of the building and maintaining the property at an exceptional level of beauty. There are many wonderful and important historic buildings in Pleasant Grove, and we appreciate everyone's interest and efforts in preserving them. All of these historic buildings and properties give Pleasant Grove a unique individuality and character.
