From the Mayor: Happy Water Year 2016!

Water is a precious and necessary resource to sustain life.

If we were prioritizing water use based on needs, people, animals, and food crops would need water more often than other vegetation.

We don't control how much water is made. We cannot manufacture water. We can capture it, store it, move it, clean it, deliver it, recycle it, and use it appropriately according to what nature has provided. It is the storing, cleaning, and delivery systems that require constant development, maintenance, and repair.

Water does not come in even or constant supply, especially here the desert. It is necessary for us to individually evaluate our own water use and make wise choices to use it appropriately to sustain life.

How can we stretch our water resources through individual conservation without totally messing up our lifestyles?

This information might help. Prior to installing our secondary water system for irrigation, the average use was 2.5 to 3.0 gpm/acre (gallons per minute per acre). After installing the secondary system, water use jumped to 7+ gpm/acre per acre.

There are many arguments about why water usage suddenly increased, or how to decrease it, and trying to associate usage with costs on our monthly bills. But, this is the bigger picture: we cannot manufacture water. Unless we cut back our own usage voluntarily, we will run out in dry years.

As one of our many New Year's Resolutions, I hope we can make one to reevaluate how we use water and set a goal to get it back to 3.0 gpm/acre. Happy Water Year! ~ Mayor Mike
